Description

The 1970s were a period of great innovation in furniture design, and armchairs inspired by Mart Stam's (1899-1966) iconic S33 model for Fasem are a perfect example.These armchairs, with their cantilevered tubular metal frame, embody the essence of modernism and the technical ingenuity of the era.They are distinguished by their chromed tubular metal frame, which creates a floating effect without traditional back legs.This cantilevered design, pioneering at the time, offers a unique combination of style and comfort.The white cowhide leather used for the seat and back adds a touch of luxury and sophistication, while ensuring durability and comfort.These armchairs are emblematic, using industrial materials to create pieces that are both functional and aesthetically pleasing.This series of armchairs
