Description

These wooden columns are made of solid light oak, a sturdy and elegant material. They date from the late 19th century, a period when woodcraft was particularly meticulous and detailed. Each column is richly carved at the top, forming a decorative capital that adds a touch of elegance and sophistication. The top plates of the columns have some stains, likely due to wear and tear. To restore them to their original shine, it will be necessary to sand and re-wax them. This process will restore the natural beauty of the wood and highlight the delicate carvings. The height of each column is 115 cm, making them imposing and suitable for use as decorative elements in a room. The square tops measure 30 cm on each side, providing ample surface area for decorative objects or lighting. These columns are
