Description

A high-quality, richly detailed plaster cast of what is known as the "Apollo of the Tiber." It is based on a 1st-century CE Roman sculpture, which in turn was modeled after a Greek original dating from around 450 BCE. The statue was discovered in fragments in the Tiber River in 1891. The original is housed at the Museo Nazionale Romano, in the Baths of Diocletian, in Rome (inventory no. 510). Mounted on a modern black iron base.
