Description

A large-scale, high-quality, and highly detailed plaster reproduction based on the "Torri Horse" or "Mattei Horse," a skeletal study depicting the musculature of a horse. The sculpture is mounted on a modern black metal base. The original was cast in bronze by Giambologna in Florence around 1585, during the Renaissance.Ranked among the most famous equine studies of the Renaissance, this model was created as an anatomical reference for artists and later reproduced in several variations, notably in versions attributed to Luigi Valadier in the 18th century.
