Description

Black-glazed cup - Magna Graecia, Southern Italy, 4th century B.C. archaeologySmall ancient ceramic cup with black glaze, characteristic of the productions of Magna Graecia in southern Italy during the 4th century B.C.Thrown on a potter's wheel, it features a simple and harmonious shape, resting on a wide circular foot. It is entirely covered with a beautiful, deep, and glossy black glaze, demonstrating a high level of mastery of the ceramic techniques of the time.Given its type and dimensions, this small bowl may have been intended for ritual or funerary use, likely as a vessel for offerings.A high-quality piece, particularly striking for the brilliance of its glaze and the purity of its lines. It is a beautiful collector's item, remarkably well-preserved given its great age.Dimensions: Height: 3 cm -
