Description

We sure knew how to keep ourselves busy in the "good old days" We didn't have TV or screens, butwe had a gramophone in the living room, and in well-to-do homes, there was also that magnificent "dream box." A walnut stereoscope, placed at just the right height--magnificent.As soon as your eyes settled into the eyepieces, you'd escape,far into the mountains, then find yourself on a pier as a Breton sailor before imagining yourselfby the seaside or in front of a Parisian landmark.This device lets you move from one dream to anothersimply by sliding the lenses... The rest was up to your imagination, which broughtthe dreams to life.Beneath the column, a door conceals the vertical storagefor 42 glass plates (though not very practical to use...). Only one plate was damaged due to mishandling.
