Description

Oil on canvas. Venetian School, mid-18th century.The work echoes the painterly style of Marco Ricci (1676-1730), who specialized in large-scale landscapes, often for scenic purposes. The work may be attributable to one of his students.The expansive landscape, framed by two nearly symmetrical groups of trees, features a long mountain range on the left and, on the right, a wide river that flows out of a lake and cascades down into the countryside.In the foreground, a washerwoman is hard at work while two horsemen pass by on the path.The painting underwent restoration and re-lining in the mid-20th century; it currently shows some color flaking and stains.It is presented in an early 20th-century frame.ARARPI0304861
