Description

Arts & Crafts style silverware, notably the pierced lattice or woven design around the rim and the possibly hammered or planished finish of the main body with double handles. The prominent handles features a figural element, appearing to be a cherub or similar classical figure, combined with elaborate floral and scrolling motifs. Sitting on three scrolled detailed feet. The pierced insert likely holds food while allowing a heat source (like an alcohol burner, as suggested in chafing dish descriptions) to warm the dish below, keeping the food warm for serving.
