Description

Superb and rare original etching by James Gillray, published on March 30, 1793, by Hannah Humphrey, 18 Old Bond Street, the caricaturist's longtime publisher. The print depicts General Charles-François Dumouriez, satirized for his betrayal of revolutionary France. Gillray portrays him grotesquely, surrounded by pseudo-patriots, in a burlesque banquet scene emblematic of British anti-Jacobin propaganda. A very fine impression, on period laid paper, with intact captions: "Js. Gy. dest et fect pro bono publico - Pubd March 30th 1793 by H. Humphrey". Clean etching, without losses, carefully framed. Referenced in the British Museum (BM Satires 8286). Dimensions: 51 × 41 cm framed. For shipping, please contact me, thank you.
