Description

An elegant games table, forming a side console, features a folding top that reveals a sliding leg and a drawer-like flap on which rests the unfolded game board, with its mahogany border and central green felt. This practical, understated, and well-made piece of furniture dates from the Louis Philippe period and is ideal for playing games with friends or simply serving as a side table. This lovely piece from the early 19th century is both practical and decorative. Its simple yet intricately crafted leg, its apron, and its beautiful top all contribute to making this side table both useful and decorative. This charming bourgeois piece is well-maintained and has always been cared for, as evidenced by its excellent condition.
