Description

German porcelain nightlight, likely from Thuringia or Bohemia. Features an impressed model number "29."
Circa 1930-1950.
A rare model, though it has a visible hairline crack on the right side.
When displayed in a cabinet, the crack is not distracting.
The electrical components--cord, plug, and switch--have been replaced for safety and are in full working order.
The piece depicts a French Bulldog in a seated position, wearing a pleated ruff; it is decorated with painted details in graduated shades of blue, brown, gray, and black over white glazed porcelain.
Inset glass eyes allow light to filter through when
