of the marble's natural beauty and the delicacy of the painted decoration creates a striking visual effect, transforming the tray into a true work of decorative art.This type of design, inspired by the Classical Revival, was particularly popular in Italian interiors in the late 19th and early 20th centuries; it reflects a lasting fascination with archaeological discoveries and the artistic heritage of the ancient Mediterranean world.Terracotta baseThe tabletop rests on an elegant terracotta base, which was added later and is not part of the original set.The warm, earthy tone of the terracotta offers an appealing contrast to the painted marble surface, thereby reinforcing the table's Mediterranean and classical aesthetic.The piece forms a harmonious architectural composition, while maintaining a clear distinction between the original early 20th-century tabletop and its later-added base.A Striking Decorative PresenceWith its generous diameter of 120 cm and a total height of 70 cm, this table commands a remarkable architectural presence.It would make a spectacular centerpiece in a classic interior, an entryway, a sunroom, a gallery, or a Mediterranean-inspired home.Its circular shape and richly decorated surface make it an ideal center table, combining functional proportions with the character of an exceptional decorative piece.A remarkable example of early 20th-century Italian classical revival, distinguished by its imposing painted marble top, its Greek-inspired ornamentation, and its remarkable dimensions.
