Description

An antique commode in Louis XV style from France, made around 1880. In the second half of the 19th century French cabinetmakers returned to the graceful, curved furniture of the 18th century, and the commode with a marble top became a favourite piece in the bedrooms and salons of the time.The front has four drawers, each framed by fine mouldings and fitted with rococo handles and keyhole plates in brass. The drawer fronts are veneered in a herringbone pattern that plays with the light. Below, the shaped apron is carved with a shell in the centre, and the front feet end in carved scrolls and leaves. A white marble top with a moulded edge and rounded front corners completes the piece.The commode is made of walnut with a warm, honey-brown patina, and the drawers are joined with dovetails. The sides are panelled and the apron continues around the corners, so the commode is also attractive when seen from the side. The four deep drawers offer plenty of storage for linen, clothes or tableware.A stately piece for a bedroom, a hallway or a living room, where it can also serve as a sideboard. It fits naturally in a classic or country interior, and makes a warm counterpoint in a contemporary home.Condition: New back feet. Stains and a scratch on the marble top, old woodworm traces on the drawer fronts.
