Description

Well body: A monolithic structure with a polygonal (octagonal) plan that tapers slightly toward the bottom, handcrafted with simple, clean lines. The exterior surfaces are marked by recessed geometric panels, framed by flat, raised moldings.Mouth: The upper edge is finished with a projecting, multi-tiered molded cornice (molding and groove), designed to ensure structural strength, provide a secure footing, and facilitate proper water drainage.Base: The well rests on a thick, quadrangular slab of natural stone that serves as a support platform and provides insulation from the ground.
