Description

Rare all-silk Hereke rug -- Turkey, circa 196092 × 62 cm · Approximately 12,000 knots per dm²This rare, all-silk Hereke rug features, in a small format, a garden motif of great finesse. Against an ivory field, two slender trees spread their branches in a mirror-like arrangement amid bouquets, foliage, and miniature flowers. Birds stand out amid the foliage, notably two burgundy birds positioned on either side of the central axis. In the lower section, two vases filled with flowers extend this symmetrical composition.In the center, a multi-lobed medallion in turquoise and deep blue, adorned with a rosette, stands out against a golden ochre background. In the upper section, the foliage forms an ivory-colored niche-shaped panel, framed by bronze-colored spandrels. A wide turquoise border, dotted with palmettes and burgundy flowers, is accented by thin ivory bands with floral motifs.The color palette combines ivory, turquoise, petrol blue, golden ochre, and burgundy, with touches of powdery pink and sage green in the flowers and foliage. With nearly 12,000 knots per square decimeter, the weaving captures even the smallest petals and the details of the plumage. The silk's sheen shifts with the light, lending depth to the design.OriginHereke,
