Description

When I bought this umbrella stand, because of its shapes that can still be guessed by the skin, I thought about Art-Déco, but when I think about it (as the mirror was saying), I rather turn to Art-Nouveau in the tradition of the Wiener Werkstätte, thanks to the use of the material, gilded brass with mercury, and by the lines which, although sober, are still very natural. Unfortunately in a "gross attic" state, namely: very dented, gilding quilted, coarse welded tin background that opens again, its beautiful proportions however do not leave indifferent. 73 cm high, 28 at the widest part of the body, 22 at the narrowest, handles 49 cm wide.
