Description

A set of four Directoire-period chairs in solid walnut, waxed and patinated.They rest on two tapered, fluted legs at the front and two saber-shaped legs at the back.The backs are curved and openwork, featuring a lovely "strap" motif in the center. This is topped by a band decorated with a rosette enclosed in a diamond-shaped cartouche.A grab bar adorns the top of the backrest.Each connecting block where the two front legs meet the seat rail is adorned with a recessed square filled with a floral motif.These chairs were made at the very end of the 18th century (around 1792); they have been fully restored and all bear signs of normal wear and tear, with a few patches having been applied (see photos). They have also all been reinforced with wooden brackets attached to each corner on
