Description

Bronze sculpture depicting a young woman with her arms laden with grapes, dating from the early 19th century, by James Pradier. A very beautiful sculpture created by one of the finest sculptors of the early 19th century.Born in Geneva in 1790 and died in 1852, he was one of the greatest sculptors of his time. In 1813, he won the Grand Prix de Rome and spent five years in Italy, where he rubbed shoulders with Canova.In 1827, he was elected to the Academy of Fine Arts and completed numerous government commissions, including the pediment of the Palais du Luxembourg in 1840.Here we have a marvelous and extremely rare work by this great sculptor, featuring a beautiful patina. Inspired by the Neoclassical style, it foreshadows the charm of Romanticism and the naturalistic style that would
