Description

This bronze sculpture depicting Aphrodite, known to the Romans as Venus, draws inspiration from the famous classical depictions of the goddess adjusting her sandal or captured in a graceful dancing pose. Created in the early 20th century, this sculpture reflects the enduring fascination with the beauty and idealized forms of Greco-Roman antiquity.The nude female figure is rendered with exceptional refinement, displaying harmonious proportions, fluid movement, and remarkable grace. The sculptor succeeds in capturing the timeless elegance associated with classical depictions of the goddess of love and beauty. Mounted on a circular pedestal, the composition combines sculptural balance with a strong decorative presence.The rich surface of the bronze highlights the figure's modeling and
