Description

Venetian blown-glass chandelier, attributed to the Murano artisan tradition, dating from the early 20th century. The structure consists of seven lights, each supported by curved arms that lend a harmonious movement to the whole. The tulip-shaped bobeches, crafted from burnished glass, add a distinctive and refined touch. The white glass candle holders complete the chandelier's aesthetic, creating a delicate and luminous contrast with the burnished glass. This piece is a classic example of the skill and craftsmanship of Murano glassmakers, known for their ability to combine tradition and innovation. Suitable for settings that call for a historical and decorative element.Product condition:Due to its age and wear, this chandelier may require restoration work and likely has an electrical
