Description

Entirely hand-knotted, pure wool, plant-based dyes, size: 3m x 2m.Tabriz, in northwestern Iran, was a historic center of carpet production and is a region well known for its court carpets, such as the Ardebil carpet. After the mid-19th century, Tabriz revived its carpet production and became a production center for exports to Europe and elsewhere.The Tabriz carpet holds particular significance. It was in the city's workshops that the first carpets intended for export were produced. After shipping antique carpets abroad, merchants began producing them themselves in workshops, according to the dimensions and colors specified by European merchants. This may be one of the reasons why these carpets do not stand out for any particular color.
