Description

This Art Deco sideboard, crafted from rosewood veneer, features an elegant, architecturally inspired silhouette in which the curved lines, symmetry, and the depth of the wood combine to create a presence that is both understated and luxurious; the rosewood reveals a rippling grain with warm hues that infuses the front with a natural and refined movement. The curved doors open with a fluid motion, reflecting meticulous cabinetmaking craftsmanship, while the long, discreetly curved gold-plated metal handles add a luminous touch that highlights the design's modernity. The central section, punctuated by concave vertical panels accented with brass moldings, reinforces the geometric spirit characteristic of late Art Deco and creates a visual balance between decorative verticality and solid volumes. The piece rests on a recessed, curved base, which lightens the structure and gives the cabinet an almost floating appearance, as if suspended above the floor. The lower portion of this base is encircled by metal.Inside, two drawers and open shelving provide ample storage space for tableware, table linens, or decorative objects, in keeping with the functional purpose of Art Deco furniture designed to complement a modern, organized lifestyle. This sideboard thus embodies the sought-after combination of the period: an elegant, structured design, a fine wood, and artisanal craftsmanship that stands the test of time with distinction.Period: 1940Restored in our cabinetmaking workshopWidth: 195 cmDepth: 60 cmHeight: 97 cmFor more photos, please visit this listing on our website: hereDelivery available upon request in France and internationallyReference 260526
