Description

A striking 750/°° rose gold (18 KT, owl hallmark) Tank ring, characteristic of 1940s jewelry, adorned at its center with a row of deep-blue, calibrated synthetic sapphires.Its bold design is based on an elegant interplay of gadroons running in opposite directions. The slightly domed central motif appears suspended between two imposing, straight gadroons. Raised and subtly set apart from the body of the ring, it lends depth and lightness to this generously proportioned composition.The shoulders extend this interplay of reliefs with godrons arranged perpendicularly, creating a particularly harmonious geometric rhythm. Viewed in profile, the succession of volumes traces a gently undulating, almost organic silhouette that softens the architectural rigor of the design as a whole.The contrast between the warm luster of rose gold and the intense blue of the sapphires highlights the sculptural character of this ring, emblematic of the powerful and assertive aesthetic of Tank jewelry.A striking piece, generously crafted in gold, whose sculptural forms are combined with an ergonomic design: the curved shoulders and fluid lines of the ring band naturally follow the shape of the finger, balancing grandeur with comfort when worn.Total gross weight: 12.70 gRing size: 52--not resizable (current diameter 1.76 cm / US size 6)Condition: imperceptible micro-scratches; a substantial, hollow-designed ring showing slight deformations and hammer marks at the shank, as well as a few visible yellow gold solder marks along the profile. These characteristics do not detract from the jewelry's overall beautiful appearance.Full online payment available via the website.Please feel free to contact us for any information regarding alternative payment methods.Are you a professional?
