Description

This elegant Louis-Philippe-era coffee table stands out for its molded, tilting tabletop. Crafted from solid mahogany, it features a turned and twisted central column, whose precise craftsmanship attests to the expertise of French workshops while evoking the British influences that were very much in vogue at the time. The curved tripod base ensures a harmonious and stable silhouette, recalling the understated and balanced forms characteristic of the Louis-Philippe style. The piece is a refined, functional, and decorative work, typical of this period when France tastefully reinterpreted the codes of English furniture to create objects that are practical, elegant, and timeless.*Period: Mid-19th centuryExcellent condition following restoration
