Description

An elegant 18th-century corner cabinet in solid oak, featuring a beautifully curved front. It opens via two asymmetrical, double-curved doors; each door is accented by two rectangular, molded panels with recessed centers, separated by a central rail that perfectly follows the piece's curvature. The cabinet is topped with a molded oak surface--finished with a "beak-of-a-crow" (ogee-and-fillet) edge--that projects slightly, and it rests on a curved base plinth. It retains its original antique ironwork: long, chased, exposed strap hinges on the stiles, and vertical, cut-out, openwork iron escutcheons featuring sinuous decorative motifs, complete with a functional key. (Includes original shelves.)
