Description

German nightlight made of Thuringian or Bohemian porcelain. Engraved model number 9209. Most likely Rosenthal Bavaria, based on the green stamp and the model number R 139.Circa 1930-1950.Functional electrical wiring with original socket, wire, and plug, all intact.The French bulldog is depicted sitting, with a painted design in shades of brown, gray, and black on white glazed porcelain.The glass eyes allow light to filter through when the lamp is lit. The "incense burner" function: On the upper back, the small, hollow brown dish was used to hold a few drops of scented oil or purifying essence. The heat from the light bulb inside warmed the porcelain, diffusing the fragrance through the small ventilation holes drilled around the dish and behind the ears.
