Description

Antique white metal sugar bowl with two handles and a matching removable lid; it weighs 347 g and measures 14 x 10 cm (including handles and lid).It bears no visible hallmarks or manufacturer's marks.The object rests on a flared circular base; its body is cylindrical and slightly tapered, and it features two molded side handles in the shape of volutes.The exterior surface of the body is adorned, all around its circumference, with a relief design created by repoussé and chiseling, depicting medieval soldiers, figures on horseback, and trumpeters.A repeating motif of trees and foliage frames these figures, with the entire design bordered at the top and bottom by friezes composed of stylized arches. The circular lid is decorated with a relief frieze depicting figures dancing and is topped by a molded handle
