Description

The Eagle Hunt. Calamine, marble. Jean de Roncourt. Circa 1930.Signed on the stone. The sculpture depicts an eagle and a hunter armed with a spear, resting on a block of the same marble as the base. The figures themselves are made of calamine. This work, of which the sculptor produced several copies due to its popularity, is known as "The Eagle Hunt." The veined marble used here bears a strong resemblance to that of Portoro, Italy. On one corner of the base, the inscription "J de Roncourt" is clearly visible; it refers to Jean de Roncourt (1869-1937), a renowned French sculptor, highly regarded for his Art Deco works created between approximately 1920 and 1930. He generally used patinated bronze--an alloy of zinc or white metal, brass, and calamine--and his pieces were almost
