Description

A large Japanese Imari porcelain vase from the Meiji period, characterised by an elegant elongated trumpet shape, with a wide flared mouth and polygonal foot. The rich polychrome decoration, enhanced with gilding, is dominated by a majestic peacock depicted among pine branches and luxuriant flowering peonies. The bird's long plumage follows the vertical proportions of the vase, creating a particularly striking composition. Elaborate ornamental bands with geometric and floral motifs frame the scene around the mouth and base, emphasising the vase's slender proportions and the richness of its decoration.Period: Meiji, late 19th century.Dimensions: 60 x 32 cm.Condition: Excellent. The vase exhibits some irregularities in its vertical axis, which is consistent with the
