Description

The Buddha did not advise any rigid ascetic practice, he was even completely opposed to these practices. He had tried them himself when he had passed Beautiful wooden Buddha sculpture fasting with perfect body details in a state of very pleasant fasting, the expression of smiling face ... the sculptor was probably a Buddhist six years to to meditate with his five companions on the other side of the Bodh Gaya River and he was so thin that when he touched his belly button he could feel the spine. Of course, when the body is wasted and starved, it will affect mental clarity. The Buddha did not recommend these practices of extreme austerity. Beautiful fasting Buddha wood sculpture with perfect body details in a very nice fasting state, smiling facial expression ... the sculptor was probably a Buddhist
