Description

Extremely rare Dutch chest in blond oak, with long hinges, side handles and a central lock entry bearing the initials "CGKL", probably referring to the name of the principal or the manor.

welcomed, wrought iron components, worked and folded cold.

Our furniture, commonly called a domed chest, rests on two parallel and molded bases, the top composed of three horizontal panels, discovers an interior probably used in the transport of gold coins, precious, or simply weapons and powder with cannon.

Completely original and in great condition, our treasure chest is presented in an original patina of mature blonde color tending to walnut, we recall that the oak is a hard wood, rather valuable and has been used for the construction of various
