Description

We present this noble round table rosewood Louis XV style completely restored, of the late nineteenth century.

The curved, elegantly carved feet start with an octagonal shape at the top and end in a pentagonal shape at the bottom, thanks to the cabinetmaker's know-how, presenting on the outside the magnificent rosewood veneered with horizontal veins.

The top and perimeter have a round shape but with rounded shapes, simulating a flower giving it an original and pleasant touch, the veneer plays an important role on all sides and parts of the table: from grain grain vertical to the underlying part fish bone, to the ground that has two forms of veneer: outer following the rounded shape of the perimeter and inner formed of four panels with a play of light/darkness.

In conclusion: a very elegant coffee table, with pleasant and original shapes, in particular the lack of bronzes, replaced by an excellent and skilful cabinetry which transmits the kindness and the elegance of the forms.

As you can guess from the images, the furniture has been restored in Madrid at our trusted atelier Prof. Jorge Paz Gonzalez specialized in the restoration of antique furniture, who has managed to maintain the original patina without losing the personality and identity of the case and this gives the furniture a significant added value.
