Description

This rare and old boat deck spot is on a brass barrel. It comes from a 1930s liner. This magnificent spot is functional and is intended for an incredible Marine decoration. It is entirely made of copper mounted on a brass barrel from a liner. This type of boat was born at the end of the 19th century and developed throughout the first half of the 20th century with the increase in trade between Europe and the North American continent. From then on, it was the heyday of companies that owned ocean liners and merchant ships such as the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique (CGT). For several decades, these companies offered their passengers the most luxurious and fastest crossings. At the end of the 1950s, these ships had to face competition from the first commercial airliners, which gained the
