Description

This stained glass panel is made with the "cloisonné en perles de verre" technique.

It consists of enclosing small colored glass balls between two glasses, the colors are separated by a thin metal wire.

This technique was discovered and exploited by Frederic Vidal i Puig of Barcelona around 1899, then resumed in France.

This creation represents a young woman sitting on a fountain. Above this fountain, a decoration of flowers and drapes.

Around 1920.

There are some lacks in the lower part.
