Description

This stained glass window from the beginning of the 20th century represents Gambrinus, the king of beer. In his left hand he holds a pipe and in his right a glass of beer. In the background we can see a bell tower. Under Gambrinus's feet, there is a winged devil.
The scene is surrounded by a frame of foliage and lianas.
It is made of colorless and colored glasses, painted with "grisaille", enamel and silver yellow. Some pieces are in blue or red plated glass and then etched with acid. Assembled by lead.
The surrounding iron frame is new.
