Description

Here is a lithograph bearing the signature of Utrillo, countersigned on the right. On the left is the inscription "Original lithograph on Montmartre le moulin de la Galette paper". Maurice Utrillo (1883-1955) is a tormented personality, painting therefore becomes an outlet for his mental disorders. The artist draws his inspiration from places of life, cafes, taverns and restaurants. In the 1910s, after beginnings clearly influenced by Impressionism, Maurice Utrillo quickly established himself as the reference artist of the School of Paris, preferring a refined representation of the streets of Paris and especially Montmartre, in which he spent the most large part of his life, to the surrealist and abstractionist effervescence of the moment.
