Description

Rare and elegant iron well, forged in the seventeenth century, with a pierced body mounted riveted and stapled with fleur-de-lys flowers on its periphery, it has an opening diameter of 67 cm at a height of 88 cm. Its size, of a section of 35 mm squared, The two arms with forged fish head end, rise from the ground and form a gallows where a pulley with hearts is called, in its original cage, to a floral composition in wrought iron. It is completed with a generous upright winding.

This well has been restored to the lower part at least twice.
