Description

This small brass lamp is topped with a red lampshade with golden edges. It illuminates with three arms of light made up of finely beaded individual cups supporting "candles". The candlestick foot is striated and adorned with two small spherical shapes. This luminaire in perfect working order has a tear on the lampshade; this visible one has nevertheless been readjusted leaving no day possible. This Bouillotte lamp, probably intended for an office, will find its place in a private as well as a professional setting.

Period: Early 20th century.

Good condition after restoration in our workshop.
Revised and operational electricity.
