Description

Very decorative and of superb quality very typical of the first part of the 20th century.
This type of cotton rug, hand-woven between 1920 and 1950, is suitable both for the floor like a kilim, or as a table rug, because it is soft and pleasant. The brick-colored decor has almost old rose supports for porthole sixteen black roses of the most beautiful effect.
The field, a medallion with a large black flower, is surrounded by four spandrels, also has small stylized black flowers and interlacing, more sustained brick.
The particularity of this type of carpet is the relief decoration (see photos) In very good condition, front and back;
This rug has been professionally and environmentally cleaned.
