Description

Oil on canvas, based on the famous 16th century painting by Paolo Veronese. Painting signed "A. Bedini" and dated 1877. Large workshop, with a beautifully chosen frame, Italy, 19th century. The theme of the painting refers to the myth of Zeus' love for the Phoenician princess of Europe. Zeus, having fallen in love with Europe, took the form of a white bull and appeared on the meadow, the playground of the princess and her companions. Europe, seduced by the gentleness and delicacy of the bull, sat on his back, and he took the opportunity to flee, crossed the sea and only stopped in a cave on the island of Crete.
