Description

Important eventful box in the shape of a crossbow in solid rosewood from the 19th century.

an Anglo-Indian work executed for the counters of the time in India and for the English export market.

the rosewood is of superb quality and has alternating light and dark veining.

this box contains two floors of closing compartments thanks to lids in marquetry of bone, and various exotic woods.

the inside of the lid is itself decorated with a large flower inlaid with bone.

each small cover offers a beautiful work of marquetry and bone inlay.

everything is complete and in excellent condition with a buffer varnish finish.

the cover has a slight crack without impact,
