Description

Coffee table with geometric inlays on the top and on the stem.

The inlays are made with the "toppo" inlay technique,

a process commonly used in Italy throughout the nineteenth century.

This process consisted in gluing together wooden strips of different essences and after cutting the blocks obtained, exploit the color difference of the sections to create various geometric shapes with which to decorate surfaces.

The round top rests on a central leg supported by three feet.

Restored and polished with shellac
