Description

Louis XVI style mahogany bookcase, lined with brass and topped with Carrara marble. It opens on the front with two glazed doors with a solid mahogany frame, mitred in the corners. In the lower part, each door is darkened with a solid mahogany panel about a third of its size. The panels and the panes are underlined by brass strips forming moldings with ogee. Between the doors, we find a half-round brass joint cover. The closing of the two doors is done by a "top and bottom" lock on the right door, accompanied by a brass entrance with its key in working order. After opening, we discover the interior, composed of three oak shelves with mahogany edge and adjustable on racks. The sides of this bookcase have an attached half column having three stop flutes inlaid with brass. The set rests on
