Description

Bookends depicting herons, in patinated metal, on a sea green marble base. This is a work by Maurice Frécourt (1890-1961) who acquired fame and prestige from his participation in the Salon des artistes in 1920 Known for translating the imperatives of the Art Deco style into his vision of the animal world, his creations have become classics of stylized animal representation. These herons are depicted straight, the beak tucked into their feathers. With their haughty bearing and their meticulously chiselled execution, this pair of bookends will delight lovers of this inimitable style that is Art Deco.  Period: 1920 Good condition. A few chips on the marble. Delivery possible by Colissimo with careful packaging and suitable protection Dimensions: Height: 13.5 cm Width: 9
