Description

An artist recognized for his aesthetic representation of athletic men, Jean de Roncourt is the perfect illustration of the Art Deco period. With subjects with clean lines, hymns to strength and masculine beauty, De Roncourt impresses with its unique way of revealing physical effort. "The Fisherman" depicts a young, muscular man pulling a fishing net filled with fish. Lightly dressed, he seems to be concentrating on his task, his body in motion. The subject has a deep green patina and rests on an ocher Trets marble from Saint-Jean-de-Ruy. Symbol of invincibility, this charismatic sculpture will seduce you with its large size and the power that emanates from it.  Period: 1930 Excellent condition.
