Description

Large Faceted Rectangular Mirror, with central part with a beveled edge. The tower windows form a large protruding frame. It is delimited by strips in scalloped natural wood, while those highlighting the edge are in striated blackened wood. The latter will be found, in an interrupted manner, on each of the angles of this Mirror. Finally, generous embossed brass spandrels, representing Scrolls, foliage and flowers, adorn the four corners of this Decorative object. This Mirror is in very good condition, despite some traces of age mainly concentrated on the upper part of the frame and therefore in no way hindering its use.  Period: 19th century
