Description

Large Camphor Marine Chest with a top made of a single plank of blond mahogany, decorated with a brass plate and spandrel-shaped reinforcements on each of these angles. This authentic travel trunk has a single plank solid camphor wood front and sides, the corners of which are dovetailed. These are maintained by brass reinforcements. The opening of the lid is done by a recessed brass handle and this trunk is equipped with side brass handles for easy transport. Inside, a brass compass called knee allows the cover to be maintained. A box completes the right side of this large storage space. This chest, used in the 19th century to transport the personal effects of naval officers, will delight you with its warm color and timeless design.  Period: Late 19th century Perfect condition after restoration in
