Description

Oil on rectangular canvas; portrait of the Marquis Pierre de Ribouton. Portrait of the Marquis de Ribouton This is represented with the bust turned slightly to the right, the face facing the viewer. His costume allows us to situate him socially, in a high fringe of the Comtadine nobility. He is dressed in a very tight-fitting black velvet jacket enhanced with gray staples, all draped in the purple cape, prerogative of the Representative Assembly of the Comtat Venaissin. His posture and his face tell us more about his character traits, wise and authoritarian. He has a face with a clarified complexion of milky powder, deep blue-grey almond-shaped eyes, a massive nose, a thin mouth, a clear forehead and a rounded chin. Her features are asserted by a perfectly powdered wig as strict as it is severe. Officer in Louis XVI's
