Philippe Poirié, nephew of carpenter Noël Poirié, obtained his master's degree in 1765 and settled in rue de Charenton in Paris. He worked in his workshop, in the same way as that of his uncle "Au Poirier" until 1788. His production of Louis XV seats are standard. On the other hand, the Louis XVI seats are of high quality, with elegant and well-balanced shapes, decorated with interlacing sculptures, pearls, winding ribbons. Some of his armchairs rest on original legs with columns. Philippe Poirié frequently used inset folders. The Louvre Museum has a luxurious ensemble, consisting of two sofas and ten armchairs, covered with sumptuous tapestries and whose tops of the backrests are surmounted by a large crown of foliage.
