Description

Oval table in solid mahogany, Louis Philippe period, resting on six molded legs, fluted on the upper part, with canted sides on the lower part. They are finished with brass sabots. Note that the lower elements have been redone to adjust the height of the Table and provide it with Stability by removing its wheels. The top, with a very beautiful ramage and cut with 'Bec de Cordin' on its periphery, overhangs a recessed belt, underlined by a discreet molding. This Table is extendable and opens in the middle, along its length, by a system of original oak slides, thus allowing the insertion of one to four extensions. The latter, supplied with the furniture, are modern and particularly light for easy handling. Each of them measuring 48 cm wide, this Table once unfolded in its entirety can accommodate up to 14
